CITY LEAGUE HOCKEY GAMES LAST NIGHT

M.A.A.A. and St. Ann's Victors in Scheduled Games.

LEAGUE STANDING.

Fair Brand of Hockey by Amateurs at Arena.

The M.A.A.A. Hockey Team continued their winning streak when they defeated the Westmount sextette by the score of 4-1 in the first of the two scheduled City League games. M.A.A.A. still stands at the head of the City League with three consecutive wins to her credit.

The first game last night was on the whole slow, interspersed here and there with some flashes of fast playing. There was not much team work displayed by either side, and the play was only kept lively through the individual rushes of a few men. The slowness of the play was undoubtedly due to the stickiness of the ice, which rendered fast playing very difficult. Meldrum and Sullivan on the forward line, and Anders on the defence were the mainstays of their team, while Macfarlane was the outstanding player for the losers.

The first game started at 9.15 before a fair-sized crowd. Play was kept for the most part of the first period in the Westmount end. Little team work was displayed from the start, and the listless playing made it uninteresting. Meldrum and Jupp each made several individual rushes, but no effort was made at playing combination or any other organized team work. The Westmount men came down several times also, only to miss a sure goal by reckless shooting. After about five minutes of play, Sullivan succeeded in slipping the puck past Barridon, and so placed M.A.A.A. in the lead. Shortly after, Sullivan, after a clever piece of work, scored his second goal, making it 2-0. In less than a minute after the puck was faced, Jupp, who displayed a great deal of speed during the entire game, made it 3-0 for the M.A.A.A. The (Continued on Page 2.)

UNDERGRAD. MED. SOCIETY HOLD MEETING

The Business of the Faculty Dance Was Discussed.

DR. CHIPMAN SPOKE.

The Duties of the Doctor to the Patient Were Also Entered Into.

The Medical Undergraduate Society met last night in the Assembly Hall of the New Medical Building, with a record attendance of 245. The first item of business dealt with the matter of rolling dice in the University Medical Buildings, and the society placed itself on record as being entirely opposed to this form of sport. The secretary then read a letter from Dr. Seane in which it was stated that the medical students would be permitted to hold a faculty dance during the coming winter, and in accordance with this, Mr. Eakin was appointed as chairman of the dance committee. Mr. Corder then reported on the Medical dinner, and stated that this function would probably be held on February 9th. He expressed the hope that the committee would be able to secure Prof. Williams, of Johns Hopkins University, to address the assembly on that occasion. Mr. Eakin then asked for co-operation on the part of the students on the matter of the faculty dance, and it may here be said that it is the duty of every member of the Medical Undergraduate Society to support Mr. Eakin and his committee, in order that the affair be carried through successfully. This means a vast amount of labor on the part of the committee, and it is hoped that every Medical student who possibly can, will attend.

Mr. Server then introduced the speaker of the evening, Prof. Chipman, who spoke on the subject of "Medical Ethics." It would be impossible to print Dr. Chipman's lecture in detail, and so a brief outline only can be given. He first drew a sharp line of demarcation between the two terms, "Medical Ethics" and "Medical Etiquette." The former, he showed, was really the theology of good living, the latter something characteristic of the polished gentleman. To very few men is the opportunity given to get outside himself and really view himself. Self interest, selfishness and egoism blinds him to the rights of others. In the medical profession, more than in any other, the individual practitioner is "shepherded" along, and made to feel as if he were more or less under direct supervision.

The code of medical ethics was first formulated at the National Medical Convention in Philadelphia (1847) and re-edited later in July, 1912, and Prof. Chipman informed the audience that it was from this latter code that he intended to quote. The speaker then alluded to the wonderful traditions of the profession, from early Grecian times up to the present, and said that we might well be proud of our ancestors, and proud of the work that is being carried on at the present time. He exhorted the members to "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good and true." He pointed out that there were changes in our dogmas, truths and doctrines, and why should that not be, for the secret of present day progress rests in the fact that as times, conditions and thoughts change and broaden, principles which formerly existed necessitated corrections and change. We have unloaded many old doctrines and embraced the new, and this has been the great factor in placing the profession on the high pedestal which it occupies to-day. Prof. Chipman gave two great principles to the coming medical generation.

First. The duty of the physician to the patient, in answering calls by day or night, to obey all summons, be-

FUNDS REQUIRED.

100,000 Students Will Need Assistance This Winter.

The call of need from any quarter is not apt to come unheeded to Canadian ears. The years of war fully demonstrated the capacity of our people to give and to suffer. The war is rapidly becoming a memory to us, but with many countries it is still a present and grim reality, for while the guns may be silent the misery and famine which are the product of war are sapping the lives of their people, and will continue to do so for many months.

A wide appeal is being made by the World's Student Christian Confederation on behalf of the student classes in Central Europe. Mr. Hoover has estimated that 100,000 students will need assistance this winter. $1,000,000 is called for from the students of the world to meet the need. McGill has undertaken to do its share, and is taking a special interest in the students of Poland. Money and second-hand clothes are being called for, and will be forwarded by the Y.M.C.A. at Strathcona Hall. It will be remembered that the Student Society of McGill voted $50 to the fund before Christmas.

The Presidents of Undergraduate Societies in the University have been asked to take the matter up with Class Presidents, who in turn may bring it to the attention of their classes. In this way it is hoped that every student may become acquainted with the need. Several classes have already made a contribution in cash. If any have old clothing to give, it may be left at the Union or at Strathcona Hall. Parcels will be collected gladly if a message is sent to the Hall—Up 1547 or 1086.

Money or clothes will be forwarded to Mr. W. J. Rose in Warsaw, a Canadian for several years connected with (Continued on Page 2.)

TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP

Anyone who made even a cursory study of conditions in Europe in the years preceding the war must have been struck with the singularly important position held by the University student. In Russia he was synonymous with Nihilism and advanced thought, and was ever in the fore-front of popular movements and uprisings. In the German countries the student was popularly represented as a swash-buckling Captain Bobadil with numerous sabre-cuts on his face and the first-fruits of Nietzsche beginning to make themselves manifest in his mental outlook on life. The Parisian student we inevitably associated with the Sorbonne and the Quartier Latin, a man of Bohemian tastes and erratic tendencies but passionately patriotic and always with the saving grace of humor.

Oxford and Cambridge each had their own version of the same type—the unobtrusive cultured gentleman of broad views and broad "a's" with a holy horror of emotionalism and a very real belief in the future of the Empire to which he belonged.

All of these types, we can now see, were significant of what the nation to which they belonged would become. Russia to-day knows less of proprietary rights and more of bloodshed than the most ardent disciple of Communism could possibly have foreseen. Germany, true to her training in the state-subsidised Universities, developed into a sword-rattling menace to civilization and called down upon herself the just retaliation of her neighbors. France and England both developed according to the promise of the schools, and in the latter country to-day it is the indefatigable effort of the public-school and University man alone that is fighting a fight with infinite understanding against a frenzied proletariat crazed with the strong drink of Bolshevism and the heady waters of unaccustomed prosperity.

If the dictum be granted that what the Universities are to-day so will be the Nation to-morrow, Canada is faced with a frightful handicap. If she is to be supplied with leaders from her colleges, the colleges are undoubtedly failing her. Indeed, it is safe to say that the curriculum and the conditions in force at our Canadian Universities are not merely unfavorable to training for leadership, they are impossible.

Look at McGill to-day. There are undoubtedly efficient engineers, learned lawyers and painstaking physicians turned out of our University every year, but the percentage of those who are fitted to rank as leaders is pitifully low. Such is the condition, what is the remedy? Without presumption, it would appear to reach back to the fundamental conceptions of what the University ought to be. It should be more than a mere treadmill as it is at present. It should impart a peculiar stamp to every one of its products that will mark him as a "McGill man." It must be prepared to take the raw material of the very young and mold and train it and seep it in the doctrines and the atmosphere of McGill, and encourage and stimulate new thought along new lines, and give him to the world as a potential leader. Until a University can do this, until it can exert an influence upon its students that will be felt all through after life it falls short of its purpose. Almost, one might be unshaken if the atmosphere of the University was wholly perverted, so long as there was an atmosphere. Such at least would be preferable to the present sullen indifference, the tragic hopelessness of McGill's attempts at evolving Leaders of Men.

student work there. The exchange situation is such that our money has now great buying power in Poland, in spite of high prices prevailing there. It is estimated that five cents in Canadian or American money will buy a breakfast better than thousands of students are getting at the present time.

"THE RIGHT KIND OF CHILD."

Give a little love to a child and you get a great deal back. It loves everything near it, when it is the right kind of child—would hurt nothing, would give the best it has away, always, if you need it—does not lay any plans for getting everything in the house for itself, and delights in helping people; you cannot please it so much as by giving it a chance of being useful, in ever so little a way.—John Ruskin.

To the Editor, "McGill Daily."

Sir—In view of the forthcoming dances which are to be held in the Union during the second term, I should like to make a suggestion to the committee in charge in regard to the catering.

These dances are all held on Friday evenings, and I know that the four hundred Roman Catholic students at the University would appreciate it very much if the caterers were able to provide something besides ham sandwiches. Surely it should be an easy matter to make up two kinds of sandwiches—say peanut butter or something of the sort, and the ham.

This may seem like something trivial, Mr. Editor, but at every dance held so far this season there was a goodly number of Catholics present, and it went against the grain to have to be content with a piece of cake and ice cream and see a plate full of sandwiches on the table. I am sure that those in charge have never given the matter a thought, and so I wished to bring it to their attention, as it will give great satisfaction to a large proportion of the student body if this is remedied.

Thanking you for your space, I remain, Sir, Yours truly,

MEETING HELD BY BIBLE STUDY

Combination of Beans and Bible Study Very Acceptable to the Students.

The Bible Study groups had a most successful session yesterday evening at 6 p.m. at the Strathcona Hall. The audience was the largest since the beginning of the session. The logs were meeting at six o'clock. The feature which helped very much to make the evening the success that it was.

The chairman took charge of the meeting at six o'clock. The feature of the evening was the bean-feast. The tables were set in the reading-room, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The first item on the programme was, of course, the bean-feed. When they first appeared, and an onslaught was made, that the waiters were terrified. And to see those beans disappear down those capacious throats, was indeed a sight. These were washed down with coffee of the finest make, and everybody agreed it was "great."

At about 6.30 the study period began. Those present were divided into three groups, under Mr. R. de Wit Scott, Captain McKay and Mr. John Bradford. Different questions were discussed and much benefit was derived from this discussion by the audience. The meeting adjourned about 7.30 p.m. and arrangements are in progress to hold similar meetings in the near future.

MED. DANCE PREPARATIONS UNDER WAY

To Be One of the Big Social Events of the Season.

EXCLUSIVELY MED.

Meeting Held Last Night to Discuss Plans.

The long looked for and much expected Medical Dance bids fair to become a reality. This is an annual event in the Medical Faculty, and one of the big social functions of the college year.

During the war this was discontinued, but was resumed last season. The event was a decided success, and although plans are only in preparation, this year's function promises to maintain the high standard of other years.

A dance of this nature, affording as it does an unparalleled opportunity for men of the junior years to become acquainted with those in the senior years, to say nothing of the ladies, should not be missed. It is essentially a Medical affair, and although a formal dance, the fact that it will be held in the Medical Building will lend a certain tone of informality to the affair. The whole building will be thrown open for the occasion, and the sitting out rooms of former years will undoubtedly prove as popular as ever.

Last night's meeting elected Mr. W. Bakin as chairman of the dance committee, and it is hoped that representatives from the other years will get in touch with him immediately, so that plans may be proceeded with as soon as possible.

Ten Minutes With The Principal

That returned men will receive a special subscription of $20,000 towards the McGill College Centennial Endowment Campaign Fund.

"In compliance therewith I now beg to hand you on behalf of this company sincere wishes for the continued success of McGill in the great field in which its most valuable work is being carried on."

"I am directed to add that the apparent delay in sending our subscription is due to the matter having been taken up with the head office in London by mail."

With regard to the Memorial Service that is to be held for the late Sir William Peterson, the Principal wished to point out that those students who had studied under the late Sir William would be given the preference should the Church not be able to hold all the men that might wish to attend. The most important item will be an address by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Fraser. (Dr. Macnaughton being very ill, will not be able to deliver this address, as was heretofore arranged). The following is the order of the Service:

1—Prayer by Rev. Dr. D. J. Fraser.
2—Hymn: "O God of Bethel."
3—Scripture by Dean Adams: Ecclesiastes, chap. 44.
4—Hymn: "Crossing the Bar."
5—Scripture by Sir Arthur Currie: Rev. chap. 21, vs. 1 to 7. Rev. chap. 22, vs. 1 to 7.
6—Prayer by the Rev. Dr. S. I. Rexford.
7—Address by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Fraser.
8—Hymn: "When the Day of Toil is Done."
9—Benediction.
10—Dead March (Saul).
The music will be under the direction of Dean Perrin.

Westmount defence did not seem to be able to hold the attacks of the M.A.A.A. forwards. The puck continually stuck to the ice, and thus it was hard to break away and set a fast pace. The period ended with the play in centre ice. Score, 3-0 for M.A.A.A.

The game resumed with the play starting off at a faster clip, and Westmount came back strong, in order to overtake the lead of the Winged Wheelers. Macfarlane was conspicuous with his flashes of speed and clever stick-handling. Penny, the goal-keeper of the M.A.A.A., saved many dangerous ones, but a great many of the shots went wild, and the Westmount team showed their deficiency in shooting. There was no scoring in the second period, and it ended with M.A.A.A. retaining their lead of 3-0.

Soon after the puck was faced in the last period, Jupp scored the fourth goal of the game, making it four straight for M.A.A.A. Heffernan, of the Westmount team, got away several times in this period, and a shot from him which looked like a sure goal, was stopped by the clever guarding of Penny in the M.A.A.A. nets. Soon after Macfarlane succeeded in scoring the lone tally for Westmount, which he made after bringing the puck down to the M.A.A.A. goals. Just as Anderson was coming down the ice on a lone rush, the gong sounded, and the game ended with M.A.A.A. victors by the score of 4-1.

The line-up was as follows:
M.A.A.A. Westmount
Penny.....Goal..... Barridon
Watt.....Defence.....Read
Mallison.....Defence.....Anderson
Stewart.....Centre.....Meldrum
Hardy.....Forward.....Jupp
Macfarlane.....Forward.....Bell
Signer.....Subs.....Sullivan
Heffernan.....Subs.....Buchanan
Carter.....Subs.....Foster

The second game, between St. Ann's and Victorias, followed immediately. As it was expected, St. Ann's defeated their opponents, and had the edge practically throughout the whole game. The final score of 6-1 indicates the advantage of the winning team, and it was only through the good work of the Victoria defence that the score was not greater. Duclos and McPetrick, of the winners, were the best and most outstanding players on the ice, although Parsons and Slater played sterling hockey for the losers. On the whole, the game was much better and faster than the one which preceded it. That the score was as high as it was, was entirely due to the inability of the Victorias' goal-keeper to stop even the easy shots put to him. St. Ann's displayed team work throughout the entire first period as well as the succeeding ones, and this was one of the chief factors for them in keeping the puck in their opponents' end. The first period ended with the score 3-0 in St. Ann's favor.

Duclos started the tallying for his team when he scored his second goal soon after the second period commenced. Parsons exhibited a fine brand of hockey, and his end to end

OLD DOCUMENT FOUND IN THE ARTS BUILDING

From the Land of the Great Soldier.

AUTHENTIC

Reciting the Strange and Unusual Adventures of Two Young Men.

Lo, in the days of preparation, when the young men who sit at the feet of the learned were faced by the horrors of examinations, certain of the followers of the Great Soldier, in the temple on the hill, even in the venerable building whose fame is known in the far corners of the earth, and which the painters and picture-makers have shown in the scripts carried into far lands by the heralds of the Great Soldier when so lately the elders of the temple decreed that many shekels, yea even shekels as the sands of the seas, should be gathered into the coffers of the temple; behold, even as I shall write, did the young men who sit at the feet of wisdom beguile themselves in pleasant pastime.

In the court of the young men where gather many sore and distressed youth to consume the incense of the herb Tabac, was arranged a mighty throne, and about this throne were gathered seats even as the seats of the great park which is by the temple of St. James near unto the palace of the vast steam-horse cohorts. And by the throne were two discs, cunningly devised, wherein were sweet fruits, even the fruits that did grow in Eden, and round about the fruits was a film, even as a crust, craftily baked and moulded.

And the heralds of the young men, crying in the wilderness of the temple, did gather many in the waysides, clothed and in their right minds, and some merely clothed, and did summon them in the name of the great king to gather in the court wherein the incense is wont to burn. And many came, even as the stars in the heavens, and did through the court round about. And the court was filled. And yet more did come, and the lord of the young men, who was in grey raiment and whose name is as Corridor, did ask the multitude to be seated. And the multitude was too vast. Lo, then did one of the young men clamber upon the chests of wrought iron which do hold the robes of the young men; and after him went many. And the taker of customs did sit at the gate of receipt, and did take from the strangers their mites, and lo, the mites did weigh much in his hand. And the lord of the young men did take the pence, even unto four solid pieces of gold, and did hand them unto a messenger who waited there, and the messenger speedily took them unto the wise men who should send them into a far land, even into the far land near the Bolsheviks that is in the corners of the earth, where other young men so labor and are sore oppressed.

And the captains and mighty men cried with a loud voice. And there gathered around about the throne a vast concourse. And they cast lots. And the lot fell upon two of the young men, and these two young men were sore afraid, for they wist not what was to be done unto them. And the captains, Puncture and one the son of Simon, cried with a loud voice, saying, "Eat." And the two were yet afraid, and they did eat. And a mighty voice, the voice of the multitude, cried, "Eat." And they ate.

But one of small stature, from the sides of Mount Royal, did rebel, and did refuse to eat. And the young men, and the captains laid their hands upon him, and did despitefully use him, and cast fruit upon him. And the noise of the fray did reverberate so that even the walls trembled. And the young man ate. And the din waxed exceeding great, for many young men were there, and great was their joy thereat. And the youths still ate, and many were the jests cast at them, for those who did not eat scoffed greatly.

Behold when they had eat, in the court of the moth-balls, far from the court of the incense, and yet not so far from incense, did gather a few of the captains and of the mighty men. And he from the groves and gardens of the hilltop cast himself upon the son of Simon, and did despitefully use him. And he rent his robes and did spit upon him. And the last state of the son of Simon was worse than his first, for upon his robes was much blood, and the juice of the fruit wherewith he was not drunken, for the fruit had not fallen into him, but upon him, was upon his face and was upon his hands, and there were wounds upon him. And he arose and went into the far court of the moth-balls. And he swore vengeance upon him of small stature, even upon the mighty captain of the treasury of the young men. And he came forth from the court of the moth-balls into the corridor that is by the gate of the temple and he swore an oath, even by the beard of the prophet, that he of little stature should suffer great ill. THE FAMOUS LONDON GAZETTE.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The London Gazette is unique. It is the most important paper in the British Empire, yet among certain classes it is also the least known, although for many years it has benefited the nation to the extent of about £12,000 a year in revenue.

During the world war this journal had a certain vogue outside its ordinary patrons, for embryonic officers of His Majesty's Navy and Army anxiously scanned its pages to ascertain if they were "gazetted." Until the official seal, in the shape of a formal announcement, appeared in the London Gazette, the officer-elect held no official status. Brief intimation in the Gazette, however, immediately confirmed him in his rank.

The second Charles was King of England when the journal first appeared as the Oxford Gazette in the year 1665. It cannot be claimed as the earliest English newspaper as the London Weekly News attained that honor by being published in 1622. The Gazette seemed to have an unchecked career, and its three issues weekly appeared with regularity.

Perhaps the most noteworthy thing happened to the paper in 1914. Volume I, rare and valuable, was loaned to the Leipzig Fair authorities, in which city it peacefully reposed throughout the war until this year, when it was returned to London, apparently none the worse for its sojourn in Germany.

It may be asked why the paper is important and little known to the majority of people. Its functions are many and diverse. In the first place, it is accepted as evidence in legal matters. The War Office regards it with respect, for it contains all the official despatches of British Army and Navy leaders when England is at war. During the Crimean War an "Extraordinary" number of the Gazette was posted outside the publishers, Messrs. Harrison & Sons, in Martin's Lane, and the populace crowded anxiously, and learned with intense relief of the Battle of Inkerman and the success of the British troops.

It is a far cry from the Crimean days to the recent war, but the London Gazette forms a link as it was the first paper to publish war dispatches. The other great newspapers, however, receive advance copies and the intelligence therefore appears simultaneously, but the public does not realize that they are indebted to the venerable official journal for some of their news. At one time it was the medium, and the only medium, through which the public became acquainted with much news that was important.

In the year 1711 it is recorded that the London Gazette and eight other newspapers circulated a weekly total of 44,000 copies. It was about the middle of the seventeenth century that the Gazette came into prominence as an advertising medium. Thus it will be found on reference to the sixty-second number of the publication issued in June, 1666, that the first supplement was announced in the following quaint paragraph: "An advertisement. Being daily prest to the Publication of Books, Medicines, and other things not properly the business of a paper of intelligence. This is to notify, once for all, that we will not charge the Gazette with advertisements, unless they be matter of State; but that a paper of advertisements will be forthwith printed apart and recommended to the public by another hand."

This mode of publicity was further developed in the ninety-fourth issue, published in October, 1666, in order to help those who had reverses through the great fire. "Such as have settled in new habitations since the late fire and desire for convenience of their correspondence to publish the place of present abode, or to give notice of goods lost or found, may repair to the Corner House, Bloomsbury Square, on the east side of the Great Square before the house of the Right Honorable the Lord Treasurer, where there is care taken for the receipt and publication of such advertisements."

Advertising to more recent times we find that Richard Steele was editor of this historic paper at a modest salary of £60 a year, which sum, however, was soon increased to £300.

Lord Macaulay, in his History of England, says, "In 1680 the contents of the London Gazette generally were a Royal Proclamation, two or three Tory addresses, notices of two or three promotions . . . a description of highwaymen, etc."

all who heard were sore afraid and trembled, for the wrath of the son of Simon was terrible to behold. And thidid him thence up to their houses from the temple of the Great Soldier, and peace was upon the land.

NEW YACHTING RACE PLANNED

British and American Yachtsmen Will Have Series Next Year.

It is now certain that there will be a very sporting and instructive series of yacht races next season between British and American yachtsmen. This is the outcome of a visit paid by Sir Charles C. Allom to the United States at the beginning of last season. It has now been announced that a challenge has been received by him on behalf of four American yachtsmen for a series of yacht races to be sailed between teams of three or four boats, built to fit one of the new international classes, representing Great Britain on the one side and the United States on the other.

The challenge for the cup has been received from the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club. The negotiations between the two countries in respect to the details connected with the race have now gone so far that the contest is assured. It will take the form of a team race of four yachts a side, and the yachts of the country winning the greatest number of points in these races will be declared the winners. It is also proposed that the contest be continued until one of the two countries represented has won the cup two years in succession after the first race in 1921, when the cup will become the absolute property of the winning country. The races will be held alternately in England and America, irrespective of results.

The class which will be selected (at all events for the first series) will be that of the new international six-meter, of which a number are now being built on the Clyde for various prominent Scottish Yachtsmen. A number of yachtsmen have already placed orders for six-meter yachts for next season. These include four Clyde owners, viz.: T. C. Glen-Coats, F. J. Stephens, Frank Robinson and J. N. Goudie. It is worthy of note that two of these owners—Messrs. Glen-Coats and Stephens—are designing their own boats. That for Mr. Robinson will be designed and built by Mifs. So far only one boat has been ordered from the south—for Algernon Maudslay and Thomas Westray—also to be built and designed by Mifs; but others have signified their intention of building, though they have not actually placed their orders.

The Americans who have taken the initiative by becoming the first challengers are Paul Hammond and E. W. Stewart, both of New York. The other two are Guy Lowell of Boston and Paul Drexel of Philadelphia. On the British side, it is proposed to leave arrangements for the contest in the hands of the Royal Yacht Squadron and the Royal Victoria, Royal Thames and Royal London Yacht clubs. Several meetings have already been held to deal with the preliminary arrangements, the Royal Yacht Squadron being represented by Sir Ralph St. G. Gore, Baronet, and Lieut.-Col. R. Sloane Stanley; the Royal London Yacht Club by Sir Charles Allom and Gerald Watson; the Royal Victoria by W. P. Burton and Lieut.-Col. J. E. Rhodes; and the Royal Thames by Capt. Richard Hennessey and Algernon Maudslay, C.B.E.

The committee have decided to hold elimination trials in the 6-meter international class in the Solent, commencing July 18, in order to select four yachts to represent Gt. Britain. Although the arrangement for this international contest are in the hands of these four southern organizations, it is intended that it shall be a national affair in the fullest sense of the word. It is expected that the best boats in the class will always be selected as champions, quite irrespective of the locality in which they may chance to have their moorings. From what has been outlined above, it will be seen that the project should prove to be of very considerable interest and value. It will not only give a considerable impetus to racing in the smaller classes in Great Britain, but it will bring American and British yachtsmen together on very equal terms.

In the international rule there is very little room for varying interpretations of the measurement formula, and it will be surprising if American designers are able to produce anything particularly novel under its regulations. At the same time, they will find no difficulty whatever in discovering the type and measurements that are most likely to suit a class that may be chosen from time to time for the purpose of the contest. They will find that these little boats are of a very satisfactory type, and it may quite possibly happen that a very strong class or classes will spring up on the American side of the Atlantic.

If so, it will be better than a multiplication of "one design" classes, which, no matter how good the particular type may be, lack the interest attaching to possible improvements in type and design that always attaches to an open class, no matter how closely regulated it may be. Although there is ample room for the exercise of the designer's cleverness in the international classes, it is not sufficient to eliminate the prospect of the very closest racing, provided the helmsmen and crews are of equal merit. It will, indeed, be a trial of

MEDICAL LIBRARY NOTES.

At the western end of the reading-room in the Medical Library is what is known as the journal room. Although primarily intended as a separate reading room solely for use of the members of the teaching staff and graduate physicians, at the same time students of the more advanced years are encouraged to make use of the periodical material.

There are on file about 260 current periodicals; these are arranged by country—e.g., those of Great Britain and her colonies together, as are those of the United States, France and Germany. The various Government publications, public health reports, etc., are placed together, regardless of country. The next order of arrangement is alphabetical; this, of course, eliminates putting together journals of the same or kindred subjects, but there is such an overlapping of subject material that the alphabetical arrangement has been chosen as presenting fewer difficulties. The two most recent issues (i.e., the current one and the one preceding it) are placed on racks; the other numbers of the same volume are placed on the shelves below.

Whilst it is not possible to admit them to this room, nor permit them to take out journals, students may, on application at the charging desk, read the periodicals in the general reading room.

The value, of course, of periodical literature lies in its timeliness; any person familiar with the contents of text-books and monographs must realize that almost as soon as such material is in the press it is out of date. During the great war a tremendous impetus was given to the publishing houses in the United States, as the result of which a great many specialized periodicals sprang into being; even while recognizing their worth, one must acknowledge the dangers and difficulties attached to a publication of this sort. This aspect, however, of the journal collection will be dealt with at a later date. At the moment it is only intended to draw the attention of the men of the final years to the wealth of knowledge to be obtained in the making use of this section of the Medical Library.

HOCKEY.

Hockey enthusiasts will be interested to hear of the Ladies Hockey League which has been formed this winter. McGill has entered two teams, one from the Royal Victoria College and the other from the School of Physical Education. The other teams in the League are Macdonald College, Montreal West and St. Lambert.

At a meeting held on Saturday Miss D. Campbell, of the R. V. C., was elected president, and Miss F. R. MacLaren secretary-treasurer. The schedule of the matches was drawn up, as follows:—
Feb. 2nd—M.S.P.E. at Macdonald.
Feb. 9th—St. Lambert at R. V. C.
Feb. 12th—Macdonald at Montreal West.
Feb. 12th—R. V. C. at M.S.P.E.
Feb. 15th—Montreal West at St. Lambert.
Feb. 16th—R. V. C. at Macdonald.
Feb. 17th—M.S.P.E. at Montreal West.
Feb. 18th—St. Lambert at Macdonald.
Feb. 19th—Montreal West at R.V.C.
Feb. 23rd—M.S.P.E. at St. Lambert.

MEN STUDENTS TO STUDY COOKING!

Men students are to invade the domain of women at Pennsylvania State College—they are going to learn how to cook. The home economics department announced today that a course in cooking for men is to be inaugurated. It will be known as "domestic science 53—cooking for men," and will include a study of the nutritive value, selection and preparation of simple foods, with special emphasis upon those suitable for camping.

The men will have a one-hour lecture and three hours a week practice in the cookery laboratory on the women's side of the campus.

Those that come to cough remain to spray.

skill amongst the various crews, as much as, if not more than, between the designers. The boats will be, of course, all built under scantling regulations, which not only prevent the introduction of flimsy construction, but insure that the little vessels shall be staunch without being absurdly heavy in hull and fittings. Their cabin arrangements are also the subject of legislation—sufficient, but not aiming at making an 8-meter yacht the equal of a 20-tonner. It is quite certain that after the first few contests, if not from the very first, the prizes will invariably fall to those who have the greatest seamanship and smartness in the handling of small yachts.

There are, of course, points upon which each side will have something to learn from the other, but yachtsmen are quick to pick up wrinkles from their opponents, and, no matter how small these may be, they will assuredly be seized upon and amplified where desirable.

FINANCIAL LEAGUE NOW BEING FORMED REPRESENTING BILLION

The Foreign Trade Financing Corporation, which is now being organized by a committee brought together under the auspices of the American Bankers' Association, the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Foreign Trade Council, marks a financial revolution through which the United States has passed.

Instead of being a debtor nation to the extent of four billions of dollars, as the United States was in 1914, this country has become the greatest creditor country.

At the organization meeting held in Chicago it was estimated that the total loans of the United States to foreigners, including both Government and private financing, amounted to $15,000,000,000, and "enabled us to pass Great Britain as the leading creditor nation of the world." The world's financial centre of gravity has been shifted to the United States. We are now, as Herbert Hoover said, in the position which Great Britain occupied as far back as 1860. We produce potentially more than we can consume. It is necessary to devise some method of enabling foreigners to buy our commodities if full-time work is to be provided for farmers, laborers or business men. Mr. Hoover said that as Great Britain had formerly so must the United States now be prepared to invest abroad some part of the surplus that we would export.

Most Momentous Conference

That is the purpose which the Foreign Trade Financing Corporation is being founded to serve. If it succeeds, again in the words of Mr. Hoover, "the project will be the work of the most momentous economic conference since the armistice." The actual technique through which the projected trading corporation will finance the exportation of American products is not yet worked out. Concerning the general methods to be employed, a member of the organizing committee said to the New York Times:

"The far-reaching conception of a great national corporation for the financing of foreign trade with a capital of $100,000,000 was approved in Chicago on Dec. 10 and 11 by a meeting of 500 bankers, producers and business men from every meeting, representing nearly all of the diverse elements of our commercial structure, approved the plan proposed to it, with a feeling of contributing to a momentous development in our economic history, that no one who attended the meeting could doubt, and the committee appointed by it is now at work."

Selling Surplus Products.

"The Foreign Trade Financing Corporation—the name tentatively adopted for the projected institution—is planned for the immediate task of enlisting a part of the surplus wealth of the nation in the alleviation of its present foreign trade difficulties. The corporation is planned beyond that, as an organization of great resources, national in its scope and control and capable of pointing the way to our future foreign trade development, as the Federal Reserve system has in domestic trade."

"We face in the United States a great surplus of production above the demands of our domestic market, and an inability to export it. This is due to the fact that our producers cannot sell on a long-term payment basis, and Europe, our principal market, not yet back to full production, and handicapped by adverse exchange, cannot buy on a short-term basis. The plan is to organize the Foreign Trade Financing Corporation with a capital of $100,000,000 and an ability under the terms of the law to issue debentures up to $1,000,000,000. The plan is to have the stock offered widely to banks, business and producing interests in every section of the country. The Board of Directors is to be made as representative as possible of all these interests and all the elements in our commercial organization concerned with foreign trade; and the institution is to operate with the prestige of this national representation and interest under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board, in the interests of no one bank or group of banks, no one producer or group of producers, but for all."

"When the stringency of our present situation is alleviated, we must face another problem. We must enter the vigorous competition in the markets of the world returning with the rehabilitation of Europe, and hold our place against nations of long experience in export trade, equipped with a thoroughly unified organization to handle it. Against the system of a nation such as England in the conduct of its foreign commerce, for example, we must pit our own abilities, if our surplus production is to be taken care of and we are to develop. Cook Demonstration Explained — "Daily" Endorsed by Dean Moyle — The Great Students "Co-op." — Sir G. Parker's Address — The Spanish Influenza.

October Seventh.

1911.—Intercollegiate football began today. It was rumored that Oglethorpe College had a strong line-up to oppose McGill.

In the enthusiastic meeting of Mod. '15, the Sophomores decided to crown Tobin as King Cook II. For the past fifty years it had been the custom for the under-classes in Medicine to have a great annual function in honor of "King" Cook, who was janitor of the Medical Building for well nigh half a century. During August of 1911, the aged janitor left this mortal earth, and was universally mourned by all McGill men. The "Daily" elected a special staff committee to work on King Cook's career, and to publish such an outline that would contain reminiscences never before known generally. Tobin, a Med. Sophomore, was only second to Cook in point of popularity, so he was fifty crowned Cook II.

Dean Moyle endorsed the "Daily" by sending to the ancient offices a cheque for $2.50, "which," he observed, "is the subscription price of the 'McGill Daily.'" He congratulated the editorial staff on its appearance and aim, and tone of the paper.

1912.—The establishment by the Students' Council of a "regular retail commercial store," with all the necessary foreign connections, was the solution offered to all students requiring practical and pecuniary aid. Students in Commerce were to be especially benefited by the chain of commercial stores that were to be put into operation at once in the United States and Canada. The University was to be the Home Office, and the students employed were thus offered both a business education and a salary. The successful launching of this "Co-op." movement was to be followed by the establishment of a University Press.

McGill lost the opening game of the season to Toronto University, the latter defeating us in a sharp and fast encounter by a score of 25 to 13. The University Board held its first meeting.

1913.—Sir Gilbert and Mr. F. Benson at a University gathering in the Convocation Hall, struck new notes in Canadian educational circles. Sir Gilbert urged Canadian Universities to extend their sphere of influence into the region of Art. Benson, in reminiscent mood, told of schooldays with McGill's Principal.

1914.—Many McGill men left for the front with Canada's First Contingent. A few that were prominent in college affairs were: J. K. M. Green, W. S. Lighthall, J. S. Brown, C. O. Scott, J. C. M. Morrow. At the Y.M.C.A. reception tendered to the Arts and Law Freshmen, Professor MacNaughton gave the best speech he ever made—to Freshmen. The keynote of his address was: "It is the duty of all to prepare."

1915.—At the annual reception tendered to the Freshmen, Prof. J. MacNaughton made the following remark, regarding Canada's young manhood: "There may not be eleven at Lethbridge, but they can play football and they can fight!"

Robert W. Lee, M.A., Dean of the Faculty of Law and Professor of Roman Law, made a scholarly address in which he advocated the inclusion of science course in the Law curriculum.

1916.—Freshmen still fresh! Supported by a strong organization and aided by automobile parties, fifty Freshmen turned the tables at a McGill reception, taking second year men and marching the prisoners through the streets.

October Eighth.

1912.—The Right Rev. Bishop Boyd-Carpenter, for 27 years Bishop of the great diocese of Ripon, England, interviewed by a "Daily" representative on his departure from Montreal, made the following remarks on culture and education:

"Education, I admit, ought in the largest sense to include culture, but too often it is taken only to include the power to pass certain examinations. Far more important is the winning of a culture which spreads through thought, and feeling, and affection. It is a possession which belongs to our being; it opens to us new avenues of pleasure and enlarging thoughts."

"No one really gains a true education who does not carry away from his university, besides a degree, a cultured spirit. Let, therefore, every student cultivate wide sympathies as well as studious habits."

At a gathering in the Strathcona Hall, the purpose of which was to inaugurate the Bible Study Courses, Rev. Mark John Levy spoke on "Eternal Hell."

A correspondent drew attention to the even then lax attendance at the Routers' Club. (History does repeat itself!)

1913.—After years of struggle, Dr. T. G. Roddick, Dean Emeritus of the McGill Medical School, had the satisfaction of seeing consummated his—a national enregistration of medical men. The scheme of a nation-wide licensing was born in 1902; it was only after many struggles and amendments in 1906 and 1911, that the bill finally became law.

The McGill team made a clean sweep in the first day of the Tennis Tourney, and the Intercollegiate championship was by this time assured. Queen's and R.M.C. were very weak indeed; Varsity, however, showed class.

Although the Red and White team defeated the M.A.A.A. by a score of 15 to 0, it was a decidedly poor exhibition of football.

1914.—A practice game with Montreal revealed the McGill team to be off color. Although they captured the long end of the score, there was a continual fumble in the Red and White back line.

An editorial, entitled "Popularity," pointed out that many a university man, "either from an over-zealous ambition or a lack of courage," accepted more club duties than he could possibly attend to. The editorial goes on: "This type of man is smothered by elections while another, worthy and able, has been denied all recognition, and the organizations suffer because their leaders have exhausted their ideas or have too many other duties."

1915.—A letter from the Field Branch of the Y.M.C.A. reported the McGill Y.M.C.A. to be the cheeriest spot on the map.

A report from the Hospital Division showed that Col. Birckett's contingent was doing very interesting work.

1910.—Dr. Blackader, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, delivered in the Convocation Hall a very interesting speech on "The Medical Faculty and the Value of Continental Research."

College Clippings

Columbia to Rush in New Manner.

The Student Board of Columbia University has voted in favor of discontinuing the Freshman-Sophomore flag rush that has been the traditional under-class scrap at the University for many years. The reason for this may be learned from the fact that four men were hurt rather seriously in the last encounter. A snow rush is suggested as a suitable substitute.

Varsity Has Winter Course to Aid Farmers.

One of the most interesting announcements of the Extension Office of the University of Toronto is concerning a two-weeks' course to be held in February, that is to furnish instruction in farming subjects of both a practical and cultural nature. It is open to any citizen of Ontario, and "its purpose is solely to enable those interested to spend two weeks in a pleasant and profitable way acquiring valuable information, and to enjoy university life for a short period."

University Papers Should Be Free.

Journalism instructors, at an association meeting held in St. Louis, declared for absolutely uncontrolled organs.

Killed While Tobogganing.

A transfer student in the College of Commerce of the University of Illinois was killed instantly when the toboggan upon which he was seated was struck by an automobile. Miss Mildred Brown, another member of the party of 17, was also killed; the remaining 15 being fortunate enough to escape with their lives. The two toboggans were being towed by an automobile when, as they turned a corner, the sleds swung in to a moving automobile and were smashed.

Student Newspaper Is Half Century Old.

The former manager-editor, S. Dix Harwood, has been picked out by the students of the University of Illinois to recount the expansion of that organ, which is fifty years old this year.

THEATRES

NEW GRAND.

The programme at the New Grand this week is well worth "honorable mention" from every point of view. The average patron of motion picture houses goes there to be amused—primarily—but at the same time he likes to see a story of ordinary human life which sets forth some philosophy of the world in which we live. The pictures at the New Grand make this excellent combination. The Mack Sennett comedy, "Married Life," provides enough laughter to last anyone a lifetime, and the other feature, Will Rogers in "Honest Hutch," shows that the latent bad characteristics in a man may often, through a twist of fate, reform him, and turn him into a good citizen. In this case it is greed and selfishness. The story is a very appealing one, and is richly garnished with shrewd humor.

The Mack Sennett comedy is fundamentally a satire on the many half-impossible movie melodramas about "two men and a woman" which have been seen so often lately. Simultaneously, however, there is a lot of "semi-slapstick" comedy interspersed throughout. It is not too slapstick, though, to be offensive, and, wonderful to remark, there are no bathing-girls. There are some very funny scenes in a hospital, where a man on the operating table gets filled with gas instead of ether, and floats around the building in mid-air, to the dismay of the occupants. Taken altogether, this comedy is well worth seeing.

The other picture, "Honest Hutch," relates the story of a man who has one of the most selfish and lazy natures that could be imagined. He lets his wife work her fingers to the bone, while he idly fishes on the river bank. Yet this idleness is, indirectly, the cause of his ultimate good fortune. One day, while digging for bait, he discovers a box containing a large sum of money, which is really the proceeds from a bank robbery. The lazy man realizes that if he appears with a large amount of cash in the village, he will be arrested. So he decides that he will have to go to work, hitherto distasteful to him, in order to get a reputation for honesty and prosperity. He buries the money and starts to do some honest toil. In the end, though he loses the buried money, he becomes a prosperous and a happy man.

There are also some fairly good educational pictures, and the New Grand Orchestra render excellent music, which is specially selected.

LOEW'S.

An excellent bill, far above the average is furnished at this theatre this week. A variety of well balanced acts together with an excellent picture provide for the theatre-goers a few hours of diversified entertainment.

Eddie Carr & Co. presenting "The Office Boy" created roars of laughter which brought forth volumes of applause. This act easily leads the bill. Zelaya, a pianist of no mean ability, comes next in mention. His exceptional rendition of classical music showed remarkable skill. A knowledge of psychology as applied to popular ragtime is a novelty.

Dot Maxwell and her ragpickers present "Songs and Jazz Numbers." The eccentricities of her cacophonous jazz band need some flinching up.

The three Kanes present an acrobatic act which, if not for its short duration, would have been more creditable. Coffman and Carrol in a "Song and Dance Skit" tell some jokes which need a new coat of varnish and some polishing up.

The drawing card this week should be Douglas Fairbanks in "The Mark of Zorro." As usual "Doug" puts plenty of pep and action into his work, and is supported by an able cast. It is quite a task to relate the exceptional plot of this picture and is also altogether unnecessary for if it's a Fairbanks picture it's good. See it and convince yourself.

Loew's British Gazette and a comedy complete the bill.

PRINCESS.

If you want to see one of the best shows you've seen since you lived in Montreal, go to the Princess this week. From A to I, the bill offers an unparalleled galaxy of first-rate acts. There is only one act that should not be on a first-class bill, and it is fortunately listed as "J," so you can get out.

The headliners as listed outside the theatre number three. With these three, in all justice, should be included Madeline de Page and Yorkov Sisters, in fact the applause they drew from a crowded house was unusual. The number features really good music superbly executed. "The Sunshine of Your Smile" by the Yorkov Sisters literally brought the house to its feet. An ensemble, "Chanson Provencale" opening the act at once stamped it as a winner. Madeline de Page was enthusiastically received in "Giannini Mia" and "The Bells of St. Mary's." A brilliant piano solo, Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12 completed the act.

Mason and Keeler in "Oh," have a supremely ridiculous playlet, mostly pantomime, featuring a Bolshevik, bombs, jewellery and small-pox. There is nothing startlingly new in the piece, but the acting is on a high plane, and leaves the spectator convulsed, which after all, is the true test of comedy, isn't it?

class Jack Wyatt and his Scotch Lads and Lassies. The artists in this number so evidently enjoy their work, are such delightfully unaffected and appealing players, and introduce so much of the genuine Scotch atmosphere into their entertainment that they leave a clean glow in the audience. The bagpipes are effective, and to judge by the sympathy aroused by their bonny wailing, every person in the audience must have been from the land of heather. Jack Wyatt gave a couple of his own songs, one of which is filled with clean sentiment, far above the usual "drivel" handed across the footlights under the guise of heart-throbs. Six curtains were called for, and the act could have stood more.

Perez and Evans, opening the bill, have an act packed with thrills. For a wonder, they introduce a specialty complimentary to Canada and to the Empire; this is pleasant after the superfluous and sometimes decidedly sickly Americanism that is so usually fed to us. Evans does some intricate things with his feet, and Perez takes awful chances with his life. You know, you wonder if he'll pull through alive, and the lad does it.

Charles Leonard Fletcher takes us back to the days of Mark Twain in a series of really clever characters; sketches, ending up with an impersonation of a bum that is quite realistic. His "Ice Cream Soda" the lament of a fountain addict, evidently struck a responsive chord down in front of the orchestra.

Lou and Jean Archer stage a melange in voluptuous scenery. The costumes are startling. Unfortunately a good scene is spoiled by too obviously forced crying that occasionally borders on the exaggerated hiccup.

Dolly Kay, listed as a headliner, has a solo syncopation act, especially for the "boys." One little ditty, "The Bucks," is a hummer. Not shady, oh no, but well done.

Girarde Monkeys, "J" on the bill, are torture to watch. They are altogether too obviously ruled by the whip. Their every move is visibly made in fear. It is surprising how the public will tolerate acts of this nature. Some day this useless and distressing feature of our vaudeville stage will get what is coming to it, and we shall be free from a so-called amusement barbarous in the extreme. There is no pleasure to be derived from watching terrified little beasts contort themselves into unnatural shapes.

GAYETY.

One of the best performances seen at the Gayety for some time is presented this week, featuring Bobby Barry in the play entitled "Maids of America." The entire performance presents "A Trip to Laughland via Musical Girls Route," and it certainly was a trip to laughland. Every time Mr. Barry appeared on the stage the audience was sure to go into convulsions of laughter, which proves that Mr. Barry is an "expert in the game."

The cast of supporters included such well known stars as George

DR. SYMONDS AT THE CANADIAN CLUB

The Rev. Dr. Symonds was the speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Canadian Club of Montreal in the Windsor Hotel yesterday. His subject was "The Essentials of a Progressive Civilization." He defined a good citizen as one who threw his brains into the common store instead of using them for purely selfish ends. To achieve national unity it was necessary, he said, for the people to discard prejudice and remember that a nation was made up of many diverse and complex elements. By a recognition of this, and a toleration of differences, greater unity could be achieved than by any other means.

As for civilization itself, many people thought it consisted of railways, steamships, automobiles, fine buildings and luxurious bath-rooms. These might be the products of civilization, but civilization was something higher. It consisted of the best development of the physical, mental and spiritual capabilities of the whole people.

"The greatest product of Canada was not wheat but men, and if our chief aim were to produce the best developed and healthiest people it was possible to produce, then the material things belonging to higher civilization would come as a consequence. In other words, the old injunction still applied: 'Seek first the Kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you.'"

Leon, George E. S. Synder, Doris Bolton, Jane May, Frank Bruce, George Swenson, Frank Wryte, John Schultz and Athalia Barnes. They played their parts well and assisted in making the performance a complete success. Mr. Leon made a great hit with the crowd when he helped the leading man in producing several of the latest jokes in modern burlesque.

The entire play consisted of good singing, beautiful costumes and appropriate scenery. The chorus, it must be mentioned, fitted these to perfection. As a whole, the "show" was full of pep from beginning to end, and it would be well worth any student's while to attend.
